G3 - Floral Fashion

by ITE College Central (Nitec in Floristry)

The Institute of Technical Education (ITE) is the principal provider of career and technical education and a key developer of national skills certification and standards, skilling Singapore for the future economy. Under its 'One ITE System, Three Colleges' Governance Model, ITE has three Colleges - ITE College Central, ITE College East and ITE College West – each empowered to develop their own niches of excellence to enhance students' success and the attractiveness of an ITE Education.

The students from Nitec in Floristry (ITE College Central) are imparted skills and knowledge in creating hand-tied bouquets, flower arrangements, packing gift hampers, setting up floral art displays for events, and managing floristry shop operations.

In this Floral Fashion showcase, our Floristry students get to explore their creativity through designing wearable floral art. We seek to transcend the boundaries of fashion and create an enchanting fusion of flowers and fabrics. Let our students captivate you with their floral couture designs, ranging from exquisite flower crowns and intricate floral jewellery to a luscious botanical gown fit for a wedding!

G5 - The Romance of Cultivating Orchids: a social, philatelic-numismatic recount

by Mr Hsien Yoong How and The Singapore Mint

One of the largest plant families in the world, orchids are also the most diverse group of flowering plants and can be found on every continent and in almost every habitat. Sought after for their stunning and delicate blooms, orchids have captured the imagination of many and inspired generations of scientists, growers, hobbyists, artists, as well as the general public. This display celebrates our orchid heritage and the important role orchids play in diplomacy, as well as helping us mark important milestones and commemorate special events. Featuring stamps, coins, notes, photos and postcards, this exhibition showcases how orchids have become an important part of our identity.

G6 - Orchids & Art

Botanical art and botanical illustration emphasise the scientific accuracy of the subject depicted. The botanical artist is required to have a good understanding of plant form and be able to make meticulous observations of the plant being illustrated, frequently under the guidance of a botanist. Botanical illustrations are usually black ink line drawings and include detailed dissections. They are an aid to plant identification and published in scientific journals. Botanical art instead frequently uses watercolour and may not include detailed dissections - the emphasis is on the visual value of the artwork, but botanical accuracy is still paramount.

The botanical watercolour reproductions featured in this display are part of the Singapore Botanic Gardens' archives, which include over 2,000 illustrations and paintings. Today it might seem that traditional botanical illustration could be replaced by digital photography. However, watercolour paintings, as well as black ink line drawings, are still very valuable for scientific research – plants may not be available as live specimens or minute details might not be clearly captured by a camera's lens.

A selection of pieces from the Gardens' collection of botanical art, both old and modern, is showcased in the Botanical Art Gallery.

G7 - Ikebana – Orchids in Paradise

by Ikebana International Singapore Chapter 135

Ikebana – Orchids in Paradise features an enchanting collection of ten Ikebana displays that celebrate the exquisite beauty of orchids.

Delve into a world where the artistry of Ikebana converges with the ethereal charm of orchids, creating a symphony of elegance and grace.

Each display within this collection tells a unique story, showcasing the versatility and allure of orchids as the central floral element. From delicate Phalaenopsis to vibrant Cattleya, each orchid embodies its own distinct personality and symbolism, reflecting the rich tapestry of nature's artistry.

Drawing inspiration from the lushness of a tropical paradise, this display celebrates the grace and allure of orchids. Each carefully arranged composition reflects the principles of Ikebana, embracing simplicity, balance and harmony. Delicate orchids, with their vibrant colours and intricate blooms, serve as the focal point of the displays, symbolising beauty, refinement and the ephemeral nature of life.

As you journey through the displays, witness the seamless fusion of orchids with complementary botanicals, such as elegant bamboo, graceful ferns and sculptural branches. Each arrangement captures a moment of ephemeral beauty, evoking emotions of serenity, joy and contemplation.
